

GREG'S AT THE HEART OF THE STEAKHOUSE

Nova worker a social media star

GREG, the kitchenhand who goes 'above and beyond', has been a rare and valuable find for the Outback Steakhouse.

"Greg is the heart of Outback Steakhouse," the North Strathfield Managing Partner Medha Ramgoolam said.

Medha was referring to the key worker she hired through NOVA Employment.

And he has become a star on the Outback Steakhouse Facebook page with thousands turning in to watch him at work in the restaurant.

The Outback Steakhouse is one of the top-rated restaurants in the West and they required staff they could depend upon to turn up every day and get their work done.

Such employees are few and far between in the volatile food and beverage industry.

NOVA Employment came up with a perfect employee in Greg and he has become one of the great examples of how the relationship between businesses and NOVA can do wonders.

NOVA Employment is an 'open employment' program. They find their jobseekers work in the general community, with the same working conditions as people who do not have a disability.

NOVA is not a sheltered workshop or 'business service'.

NOVA supports people with all types of disability to gain employment and assists them in maintaining employment for as long as the worker requires.

If your business needs dedicated staff who love their job, NOVA Employment has skilled and talented jobseekers looking for opportunities.

They help employers find motivated and keen employees with the skills that match the role and assist workers to develop and advance in their careers.
